$1,000,000 MINING DEAL.

Hopkinsville People Bought and Paid for the Property

IT IS INCORPORATED.

Messrs. L. Haydon and W.
G. Harris Among the Officers and Directors.

The purchase of and cash payment for the celebrated "Charleston Coal Field", three miles North East of Dawson Springs, together with the incorporation of the "Dawson Coal Coke and Railroad Company" for half million dollars, with the Main Office located at Dawson Springs, has just been made public. And in connection are pending negotiations in North Alabama for a similar coal field, including mines and plant of one of the largest coal companies in the South, which when combined with the Dawson Coal Field will make it a million dollars property, with a daily output of 2,000 tons of coal. The Charleston Coal Field has always been recognized as the finest coal deposit in Hopkins County, and contains two heavy veins of coal ranging from 5 to 8 ft. in thickness, with mines already opened ready for business. The property is covered with a heavy growth of timber, which will be used for the immediate development of the property, and in the construction of a railroad from Dawson out to the mines.

The Mines will be equipped with the most improved modern machinery, and a large force of men employed by the Company.

The Company is composed mostly of Southern bankers and capitalists, who are buying and improving Coal lands in the South, as a profitable and permanent investment for their surplus money, which they regard as the best investments they can find. The deal has been quietly manipulated by Messrs. W. G. Harris, and H. L. Haydon of this City, who have bought, and paid for the property, incorporated the Company, and are two of its main officers and directors. This will be a matter of great financial importance to the City of Dawson and will add very materially to its annual business.

DUFFY FIRES A BOMBSHELL.

Charges That Republican
Sheriff Is Misappropriating Funds.

POCKETING PENALTIES.

Amount Supposed to Aggregate at Least $8,000 In Last Four Years.

The Democratic county candidates have been in many parts of North Christian this week, firing red-hot shot into the panic-stricken Republicans.

John C. Duffy is leading the fight, which from now on is to be very aggressive, in a series of the strongest speeches ever heard in the county in a political campaign.

Mr. Duffy has developed into an orator of wonderful power on the stump and his speeches are as fearless as they are convincing.

For years it has been the habit of the Republican sheriff of Christian county to regard the penalty of six per cent. due on county taxes after December 1st as one of the perquisites of the office, and although the Democratic members of the Fiscal Court have repeatedly tried to call this matter up, they have never succeeded in getting this money turned into the county funds.

Mr. Duffy has made this an issue and is charging that the amount of penalty thus misappropriated amounts to thousands of dollars. Esq. J. F. Dixon, one of the best posted members of the Fiscal Court, says it amounts to about $2,100 annually, and that the courts have repeatedly decided that the penalty money belongs to the counties and not to the sheriffs. Mr. Duffy has fortified himself with an array of facts and legal decisions that are eye-openers wherever he speaks.

It is not unreasonable to look for a landslide in 1905 that will equal the one in 1890, when the Republicans were swept out of power.

The nominees will make speeches at the court house at 1 o'clock today. Mr. Duffy will have a good deal to say about penalties and public funds. Don't fail to hear him and the other candidates.

Revival at Mayfield.

Mayfield is having the greatest revival ever in the town at the Baptist church. An all night prayer meeting was held Saturday night, and 174 persons stayed all night. Business houses close and all sorts of special services are held. There have been more than 100 conversions and already 80 additions to the church.

The Forbes Manufacturing Company's saw mill at Pembroke burned last Saturday night. The fire was caused by sparks from the engine falling on the shed, igniting it. Damage to machinery amounts to probably $150.

Case.

REYNOLDS ALIAS LYON.

Trial of The Third One Of
The Gang Now In Progress.

Russellville, Ky., Oct. 6.—The jury in the case of W. R. Fletcher, charged with complicity in the assault on Mary Gladder, in this county, some time ago, returned a verdict of guilty Thursday morning and fixed his punishment at death.

Fletcher did not break down when the verdict was read, but was very pale and nervous. His three daughters were sitting with him at the time, and they wept bitterly.

Guy Lyon was at the bar when the Fletcher verdict was read, and he showed as much fear as did Fletcher. The feeling is greater against Lyon than any of the rest. His trial is now in progress.

Mr. Frank Rives has returned from a business trip to Louisville.

CIRCUIT COURT.

Trial of James Courtney Set
For To-Day.

This week has been consumed in the disposition of common law cases, the most important of which was the suit of E. B. Tyler against the Ideal Construction Co. for $5,000, claimed as due him for services, etc. The trial of this case consumed two days. The jury returned a verdict for plaintiff for $562.50. The verdict was signed by ten of the twelve jurors. An appeal will likely be taken.

The case of the commonwealth against James Courtney, indicted for willful murder, is set for to-day.

The case of Ed Moseley, the only one of the nine Pembroke negroes who had not been tried in connection with the murder of the unknown man about two years ago, was called Thursday and passed for the present, no order being made. Moseley is out on bail.

CLOSE CONTESTS.

Two Games of Foot Ball
Played Here.

The South Kentucky College foot ball team and the High school eleven played two games, one last Saturday and the other on Thursday. S.K.C. was victorious in both contests. The first game was 5 to 0 and the second one 15 to 0. The third of the series will be played on the College grounds one day next week.

Mrs. Tryon's
Bargain

MRS. TRYON was a truly thrifty wife. As a consequence she was a bargain hunter. She often bought little things because they were cheap—not that she particularly needed them, but she would never acknowledge this.

Mrs. Tryon was not at all surprised one morning to find his breakfast standing cold on the table and a note from his wife explaining that she had seen an ad. in the paper that called her to one of the large department stores.

"They're selling hats to-day at half price, and that brown one I saw the other day for $15 will be $7.50 this morning if I can get there in time," the note went on.

By the time Mrs. Tryon had read the note and finished his breakfast Mrs. Tryon was in the heat of the scrimmage in the millinery department downtown. Although she succeeded in getting there just as the doors were opened, 20 other women were ahead of her and the scrimmage up the stairs was as thrilling as a basketball game. Each of the wise ones grabbed a clerk at once, knowing that was the quickest way to get walked on, but Mrs. Tryon was one of those who did not understand this. She found herself running about looking in vain for that brown hat she had set her heart on and no one to assist her. She came across one "cotton" that she had looked at in the window a few days before, but had given up because it was too expensive. Here at least was an opportunity to see how she would look in it. So she took off her own hat and laid it on the counter while she walked eagerly to the glass with the "cotton" in her hands.

Now the hat that Mrs. Tryon had laid on the counter was a dainty little thing in white with pink flowers tastefully trimmed on the brim. Mrs. Tryon wore it as much as she was thoroughly tired of it. Yet it was still a pretty hat.

After she had gazed longingly at her reflection in the glass and had noted with a sigh how well the expensive hat became her, she returned to the counter just in time to see an eager shopper trying on her hat.

Mrs. Tryon was shocked a bit at first and then she smiled at the situation. Instead of demanding her property in a hurry she watched the other woman cocking her head before the glass, trying herself from all possible sides, and she was greatly amused at the sight. She could not help, but acknowledge, however, that the woman looked very well in the hat.

When the shopper was finally through and had laid the hat back on the counter, after looking it over for a price mark, Mrs. Tryon took her hat from the counter, while the woman's back was turned, and walked on down the aisle.

She was carrying her hat in her hand and after a bit she noticed that several women looked at the hat and then at her as she passed. But Mrs. Tryon was looking for her brown bargain and paid little attention to them.

A little later a woman approached and touched her on the arm.

"Are you going to take that hat, madam?" she inquired, pointing to Mrs. Tryon's hat she was still carrying in her hand.

"I believe I may as well," Mrs. Tryon responded. "It's the one I wore down here this morning."

"I beg your pardon," the shopper answered in some embarrassment. "I saw you carrying it, and so I supposed it was on sale."

They smiled at each other and passed on. As Mrs. Tryon was lingering over some other hat when she soon discovered a large woman and one of the clerks talking together farther down the aisle and she looked up just in time to see the large woman pointing at her. Mrs. Tryon became interested in watching them and as the pair saw that they were observed, the clerk walked away.

A moment later she returned with the head of the department, a well-dressed, important looking gentleman, and then to Mrs. Tryon's amazement the three began a conversation which was about her, there could be no doubt.

"They suspect me of being a shoplifter," was Mrs. Tryon's first thought, and she turned red to the roots of her hair. She did not know what to do, and there was no time to think, for the gentleman approached her straight.

"I beg your pardon, madam," he began, looking closely at Mrs. Tryon, "but there is a lady here who has complained to me that you have been carrying around a hat all morning that she would like very much to look at. She says you don't seem to want to give anyone else an opportunity to try it on and she says you have not bought it, she is sure. I would suggest, if you will permit me, that you decide at once if you want the hat, for if you don't, I'm quite sure the other lady will take it."

"I really hate to disappoint the lady," Mrs. Tryon answered, having never heard herself, suddenly, "but she really cannot have the hat. The truth is, the hat belongs to me. I've been wearing it all summer, and I couldn't think of parting with it."

The gentleman saw his mistake in a moment, and apologized profusely. Mrs. Tryon began to think more and more of her own hat as she walked away and she smiled to herself as she saw the consternation on the face of the other customer as the gentleman explained the error.

By some freak of fortune, Mrs. Tryon ran across the brown hat she was looking for, and she hurried to the glass to put it on her head.

It was just what she wanted, and she started to the desk, being unable to find a clerk, in order to conclude her purchase. She was carrying her old hat in one hand, and the prospective purchase in the other, expecting when she was suddenly stopped by an excited woman who demanded:

"Is that hat sold?" pointing to Mrs. Tryon's white hat trimmed in pink flowers. Mrs. Tryon was setting rather tired of this experience.

"No, madam, it is not," she replied, rather tartly.

"How much is it?" the woman persisted. Mrs. Tryon saw at once that being hatless she had been mistaken for a clerk. She didn't care to tell the lady, for the sake of the establishment, so she said, as politely as possible:

"The original price was $25, but—"

"Yes, I know," interrupted the lady. "I take it twelve and a half to-day. I'll take it." And before Mrs. Tryon could protest, the lady had snatched the hat from her and had handed her the even change. "I won't take it," Mrs. Tryon said. "I'll just carry it until I get through on this floor."

Mrs. Tryon took her $12.50, and walked meditatively to the counter, intending to explain the matter to the head of the department. But before she could be waiting on she changed her mind. When the busy girl finally reached her, she merely said:

"I'll take this hat, please. Seventy-five cents, please."

And with five unexpected dollars in her pocket, Mrs. Tryon walked to the nearest mirror, placed her purchase on her head and walked out of the store.

"I never yet did get beat at a bargain," Mrs. Tryon told her husband that evening. "but I never made five dollars so easy in my life."

"That certainly was a bargain," Mrs. Tryon responded. "Let's buy something for the house with the five dollars."

"Indeed, let's not," Mrs. Tryon smiled. "I'm saving that toward my seashell cap."—Kansas City Star.

WHY BUCK'S HOT BLAST

Heater Will Actually Pay For Itself.

Because Buck's Hot Blast will produce as much heat and as satisfactory a fire in every way, by using the cheapest dollar and a quarter coal, slack or screenings, as other heaters in which you must use high grade soft coal or hard coal. You can see at a glance how soon this saving in fuel will make a Buck's Hot Blast actually pay for itself. It is not the first cost of stove that counts so much, it is what you have to pay to feed it, in coal.

This is the "Buck's Stove."

A Misplaced Infatuation

By WILL REED DUNROY.

LOVE is a very strange thing, whether it be in novels or just here in plain, prosaic Chicago. There is no telling how it is going to affect those who catch the disease. If it is a disease, as some scientists affirm, and the antics it makes people do are logical.

To some love comes like a sudden burst of sunlight, and after that the world becomes a perfect heaven or a perfect place of torment, according as to how the one loved treats the one loving. Some learn to love gradually and there are those who say this is the best plan, as to those devoted to the longer. He that says it may, the story following is one that deals with the sudden submergence love and the attendant melodramatic consequences.

Walter Graham is the hero of the tale, and in this case he happens to be a young clerk with a salary which is barely adequate for his own necessities and the few disquisitions in which he indulges. One in awhile he takes a trip across the lake of a Sunday, and it was on one of these trips that he fell in love.

She was on the boat. The rude wind tossed her hat from her pretty brown head and with a little scream

"MY HAT HAS GONE INTO THE LAKE," she turned to a young man beside her and exclaimed: "My hat has gone into the lake; oh, what shall I do?"

Now, the young man standing by her side was Walter Graham, and with a gallantry born from the flash of her brown eyes he hurried to the side of the boat and found the hat had caught on a beam near the water's edge. He hurried below, and after a deal of strenuous fishing with a long pole he rescued the millinery, and with a very red face, with it in his hand, he came on deck.

She thanked him profusely and that was how the trouble began.

From that time on Walter Graham had no eyes for any other woman in the world. He had ascertained her place of residence, but what was more to his purpose, the place in which she was employed, and he began to lay siege to her heart with all the ardor of a youth attacked for the first time with an affection of the heart.

The girl was besieged with invitations to lunch, with opportunities to see the reigning theatrical productions and all sorts of other things that are supposed to be alluring to the feminine mind, and she had been of a coquettish nature might have had no end of fun at his expense, but she was not altogether of that sort, although, as events will show, she was not averse to playing a trick or two in order that she might further her own fun.

The girl was engaged to a young man of whom she was very fond, and so she tried in every manner to discourage the attentions of Graham, but to no purpose. The young man would never take no for an answer. He was persistent in his attentions in season and out of season, for he had a bad attack of what is often designated as "silly love."

No amount of cold water that the young woman would throw on the young man's affections seemed in any manner to cool his ardor. The more she rebuffed him the more determined he was, and he had been of a coquettish nature might have had no end of fun at his expense, but she was not altogether of that sort, although, as events will show, she was not averse to playing a trick or two in order that she might further her own fun.

Things went on this way for some time. The girl did not like to hurt the young man's feelings, and yet she was determined to be rid of his attentions. She pleaded previous engagements as often as she could and tried in every way that is known to a young woman to show that his attentions were not wanted, and she as well as many other young women know a good many ways in which to discourage young men.

The game had been going on some little time when Graham got up a big house party. Some of his relatives had taken a summer cottage at one of the lakes in northern Illinois, and nothing would do but that the girl and some of her friends must go up for a week-end outing.

Now, the girl fought against the trip, but it was of no use. Graham was insistent. Finally a party was made up and by clever maneuvering the girl had her fiancé invited. The next thing was to be able to keep Graham at a distance while she enjoyed the outing with her own young men. The problem was a clear one and she was equal to the occasion, as what follows will indicate.

Graham worked hard for days to make the outing a success. In honor of the auspicious occasion he had his tailor make him a handsome white flannel suit, and when the day of the party arrived he was all spick and span in his suit, with a handsome Panama hat to top it off.

The people gathered at the train with their parents, handbags, suit cases and other luggage, and the chaplains were also on deck, lynx-eyed and on the alert.

The girl was radiant in a pretty white gown, but she wore a worried look.

"What an earth am I going to do with Graham?" she whispered to her friend Violet.

"Leave the matter to me," replied the friend, "I will help you out. I have been mixed up in just that kind of trouble many times, and I am sure I can assist you."

Thus assured, the girl plucked up courage and her face grew as bright as the day. In due season they arrived at the lake and the first thing Violet suggested was a sail on the blue expanse of water.

Graham was enthusiastic, and he contrived to get a boat in which Violet and young man should accompany the girl and himself. This left the girl's young man on shore, and he scowled and fumed right heartily until Violet got an opportunity to whisper something in his ear, and then he smiled, also.

As the boat pulled out from the shore the young man was left clutching himself and seemed thoroughly resigned to the fate of remaining on shore.

The little boat plowed through the blue water of the lake, and all went well until the girls decided they wished to change places in the boat. It was Violet who suggested it, and an attempt was made to make the change, when Graham, in some unaccountable manner, was tipped into the water.

The girls screamed, and tried to save him, but over he went, flannel suit and all, and when he came up he clutched at the side of the boat and hung there like a limp, white rag.

After a deal of excitement and trouble, he was hauled aboard the boat, and the little party returned.

There was much excitement when young Graham was landed at the little boat pier like a drowned rat, and, of course, he had to hurry to the cottage, for he was as wet as could be.

Everybody seemed to feed badly about the accident, but there was nothing for Graham to do but hide from sight. His flannel suit was ruined, and he had no other clothes with him.

The girl, of course, had to fall back on her own young man as an escort, and Violet and her young man soon joined the girl, and everything was as lovely as could be.

Graham remained in the cottage all day long. After his flannel suit had been dried in the sun he found that it had shrunk so he could not possibly be seen in it, for the trousers came nearly to his knees and the coat sleeves stopped short at the elbows.

Poor Graham was compelled to remain indoors all day, while the other members of the party had a great good time. Finally when night came on and it drew near train time the poor, unfortunate young man, under cover of the darkness, sought the train, and hid himself away back in a dim corner, where he nursed his disappointment and chagrin.

Now and again he could hear the laughter of the merry crowd in the other end of the car, and it cut him to the quick to find that the one he worshipped was the merriest of them all. He could not hear what they were saying, and it was well for his peace of mind that he could not, for most of the merriment had him for its butt.

"How did Graham happen to fall overboard?" asked a member of the party.

"He tripped over my foot," giggled Violet.

"My, but didn't his flannel suit shrink, though," exclaimed the girl.

"It was a fortunate accident, though, wasn't it?" queried Violet, with a regular twinkle in her eye.

"I do remember now that you told the girl you would see her out of her difficulty," remarked Violet's young man. "And I'm not so sure but that accident was well planned."

"Well, I told her I'd help her out, and it seems that I helped him out, too," said Violet.

And Graham does not know till this day how much mischief there was in that accident—Chicago Chronicle.

COLORED CANDIDATE

Lights Into the Court House Ring In Control.

To my colored friends of Christian county:

Not that I desire to slight my white Republican friends in the least, I wrote to you last week.

This week I desire to address my remarks to the colored exclusively, with no intention whatever of infringing upon the feelings of the white man.

My colored friends, you are continually saying that you have no recognition in office. That is true and the reason why is because you won't recognize yourselves. When a colored man comes out and asks for an office you turn him down and vote for the very man who has been picking up the persimmons as fast as you would shake them down. They claim that the longest pole gets the persimmons, but I tell you the negro has been the pole and the white man getting the fruit, and the pie. So if you want your own race to share with those you have put silver spoons in the mouths of for more than forty years, come out and support your own color in November. I am a colored man and one whom you all know. I have lived in your midst for many years and have tried to live an honor to myself and race. Therefore, I deem it your duty as well as your privilege to come out to the polls in November next and without money and without price support me. If you ever expect to elect one of your race to office, you yourselves will have to vote for him, and you had just as well commence on me as any one. So let me beg of you to come now and let us work together and divide the sweets and the sour alike. Don't sell your votes for a peck of flour, bushel of meal or a dollar, but be honest over election and let us break up the band of big I and little you. Around about the temple where justice ought to be and should be, it is a ridiculous attitude to find ourselves in, for a little band of eight or ten meguls to enter the secret chamber and say whom the county of Christian shall serve, who are no better than we, and no more competent to fill the various offices than we, or many of us at least.

So I say again come out and let us, if we can't win ourselves, have a change and let the old blunders who have fattened themselves and their posterity on our property for many years retire, and try a new team. Now please don't mistake me for a Democrat because I am asking you to help me retire these old rats, because if you want a child to love you, correct it when it gets unruly, even if it have to whip it. So likewise the only way to get good, pure and clean county government is to clean out these old nest eggs and put in new ones, and the only way to do it is through the ballot box. So my colored friends come out and let us go together in one body and one time, at least, and assist in bringing about a change by tearing down the strongholds and moving out the stale and impure atmosphere and cesspools of political corruption now existing round about the temple of where justice ought to be. Come one, come all and vote for me and against the entire ring or clique that is now and has been demoralizing the rights of the people and robbing the voters of Christian county out of their rights and privileges under the constitution of this great commonwealth, and when you have done this you have done your duty to both yourselves and your country.

I am yours most obediently,
M. V. B. RUSSELL.

PAT CROWE

Famous Omaha Kidnapper
Arrested at Butte.

Captain of Police and Detectives Capture Him as He Emerges From Saloon.

Butte, Mont., Oct. 5.—Pat Crowe, wanted by the Omaha police for the kidnapping of the son of Millionaire Packer Edward Cudahy in 1900, was arrested in this city Monday night. Crowe's identification has been made complete through photographs sent to the authorities by the Omaha officers.

Crowe acknowledged he was the fugitive, becoming alarmed when he feared the authorities were going to shoot him. Captain of Police W. F. McGrath and Detective McInerney made the arrest, placing the muzzles of their revolvers against his stomach as he emerged from a saloon in the Tenderloin section of the city.

Crowe declared he would return to Omaha without requisition papers. He cursed bitterly at his arrest, expressing chagrin at his apprehension in a town the size of Butte, when, he said, he had traveled the world over and evaded arrest in all the large cities.

Crowe has two brothers in Montana, one living in Butte and the other at Great Falls.

A friend of Crowe's informed the local police of Crowe's presence in the city, and his arrest followed after photographs of the fugitive had been secured from Omaha.

LETTER FROM COL. EWING.

Communication Addressed
To Members Of Dark
District Association

IGHT NOT YET OVER.

Prices Net To Far Apart As Have Been Reported.

GLENKAYFN, TENN.,
September 29, 1905.

My Dear Sir:

In my letter of the 14th inst., requesting the presence of every member of the Association at Guthrie on the 23d inst., I did not think the jollification could be the success it really was. Such a greeting, such a handshaking, such an exchange of observations and plans for the future, and such an evident determination to be honest comrades in a necessary, though long and severe battle would convince the most doubtful man or woman of the fruits of our plans. We all fully realize we have entered a crusade against a dangerous, far-reaching foe. Such the originators of this movement knew in the beginning would certainly be the case. Experience has taught us we were not mistaken. We have depended on the loyalty and common sense of our members to keep a "shoulder at the wheel" at all times and to be vigilant in the protection of every interest of every member, day or night. We all knew that this organization was not an appropriate home for a selfish man.

We wanted, and have in the Association, thousands and thousands of true souls, who are looking for the "common weal," and who would despise the man who would kick, hold back and balk because every hour did not bring forth for him a perceptible advantage. Our aim was to do our best, and our hosts of members have aided us nobly and not faltered. Any man who will carefully weigh conditions to-day, and of the past, will realize that we are making strong inroads into the injurious methods heretofore pursued by those who were buying our tobacco for less than its value, and will concede it his duty to be relentless in his efforts not only to do a proportional part, but to do everything in his power to shove this grand work forward. We are in the midst of a terrific battle to-day.

In my last letter, of the 14th inst., I spoke of a very large sale which was in prospect. We have kept up continuous negotiations, but it is a waiting battle, as to prices, though we are not as far apart as has been reported. We know what our good tobacco is worth, under conditions existing, and are convinced that with the immense increase in membership in the Western District our tobacco is becoming more valuable each hour. Our next prices to these same buyers are more apt to be higher than lower. In 95 per cent. of the cases of tobacco already sold, the parties observe and appreciate a substantial increase in price, and are thus buoyed to greater interest and activity for the welfare of the Association. The leaders are conscientious men, who realize their responsibility, and who would say to the very small element, who possibly expect too much, "Be patient; go to headquarters for any information concerning something you do not understand." If you have a grievance, and we all know that accidents, mistakes of judgment and kindred unforeseen emergencies, will arise—do not talk it to those who cannot correct it, neither talk it in the presence of an imprudent man, who would make a great deal out of something which might be properly and satisfactorily explained; and above all, do not talk in the presence of any man who is not a part of us, body and soul. As a matter of course, we always want intelligent criticism, for this helps us to become more perfect, but wherever presented for rectification this criticism should be thoughtful, kindly and patient, and never in the nature of a "kick." Your Executive Committee has been extremely careful not to make statements that were indiscreet, misleading or in any way deceptive. They are earnestly endeavoring to do the very best they can for you, and must have in return your confidence in them on in the conduct of the affairs of the Association, which is as much yours as any other member, whatever his connection may be. The Executive Committee does not hesitate to tell you positively that the membership is increasing enormously; that the market conditions, from the very best information we can get, are much more promising for the Association and we believe the large buyers are simply trying to starve us out. They never believed we could organize, they never believed we could hold out nearly this long, and they do not believe we can possibly hold out much longer. It is the opinion of our Executive Committee that some very high prices will be offered by our enemies among buyers, on the new crop in an effort to stamper the ignorant and weaker ones of our Association, and thus cause a general breaking of pledges of our members. Of course, if such a thing were possible, a few dishonest men might get good prices with a law suit tied to it, but prices would immediately go down to where they have been for the past several years. Our members have commenced to think very seriously, and it is not probable that they will ever again be easily handled by avaricious men. Your Executive Committee appreciates the fact that you went into this fight to win, to win, to win, and that to do so you were willing, as an honest and sensible man, to bear a proportionate burden with them, until Victory, thrice Victory, shall be the welcome you receive at every threshold, however humble. We have nothing whatever to discourage us, never have had. We have known from the beginning what we had to contend with, but if the horizon was black with ominous clouds, we should still say, "Stay on, stay on, it is Victory." It must be, and shall never be anything else.

Yours truly,
F. G. EWING,

CARNIVAL NEARING END

Has Been a Distinct Success
In Character of Shows

ATTENDANCE LARGE

This is the Last Day With
Some Special Features

Tonight at 12 o'clock the best carnival that Hopkinsville has ever had comes to a close. No doubt it will be a finish in a burst of splendor and merriment as it has been during the entire week. Everybody is highly pleased and the voice of the "knocker" is silenced. There is nothing heard but "boosting" for the Great Parker Amusement Company which has furnished the largest, the best and the cleanest line of attractions ever exhibited here. Hundreds have "hit the trail" during the jubilee week, and the first one is yet to be heard from who wanted his money back because the company failed to deliver the goods.

The carnival committee is to be congratulated upon securing for Hopkinsville the best on the market for its fall festival and county fair. The high standard of the Great Parker Amusement Company has been attested by the presence of the best people of the city. When convinced that they are not going to be bounced out of their coin by fakes, skingame artists and fakirs, or shocked by off-color attractions the elite of the city were not slow in giving their patronage and making the gala week the unqualified success it has been.

Fully 20,000 people have been in attendance. On the Pike of the Parker Company there are no "Boscos who eat 'em alive," or any of those festive oriental fairies who have made a name for Cairo and the region of the Nile. Their absence may have been a disappointment to the self-termed "live ones," but the Parker does not cater to the tastes of the depraved. They claim to have a show that has the approval of the clergy. And it isn't a dead one either. There's plenty doing of the right sort of amusement. "Great" is the proper word to use with the Parker name.

It is the clean show that is the money getter. Messrs. C. W. Parker and Con T. Kennedy, manager and owner of the show exhibiting here, are the two men who deserve equal credit for raising the standard of the carnival business in general. Only a few years ago a carnival on street fair meant a round of rough house debauchery. At this stage of the game Parker and Kennedy stepped in with the moral map stick and the cleaning they gave the business had far reaching effects. Other managers soon realized, from the receipts of the Parker shows that it was the clean aggregation which gathered in the shovels, and gradually they have "gone and done like."

P. T. Barnum's statement that the American people like to be humbugged may have been true in his circus business in the good old days. But when an aggregation stays in a town a whole week it has to deliver the goods or it is soon a dead one.

Ten years ago Messrs. Kennedy and Parker were practically unknown. As a result of their united efforts, unceasing and straight forward business methods and remarkable executive ability, the latter is now heralded from ocean to ocean as the amusement king of America; while Mr. Kennedy is one of the most popular and highly respected showmen in the business. The expressions of the local committee regarding Mr. Kennedy and members of his executive staff are characteristic of the opinion of all who have had business dealings with them.

That Festive Pike

The several shows of the big company have been reviewed herein before. Suffice it to say they are all top-liners from the Coliseum down. While doing the Pike one should not miss seeing Wu Ching Ma, the Chinese midwife. If you want to laugh take a peep at the living doll man. Wu never carried off any blue ribbons nor prize packages from a beauty show, but he is there with the goods. It is to laugh when you see the queen of the heathenesses. Wu's history is an interesting one. By the Chinese he is considered a "hoo doo" and a monk can't be induced to look at his Chinese people. Ordinarily Wu is a peaceable citizen but when he can't "hit the hop" there's things doing around his establishment. "The Sign of the Skillet".

Mr. Wren, his manager, secured the curiosity while traveling through the lower country of the yellow empire. When he was brought to America the Chinks celebrated the exodus, the emperor issuing a proclamation of thanksgiving, the harmless little creature being regarded as an evil spirit. Mr. Wu first exhibited Wu at St. Louis and he proved a magnet on the pike. He stands but 27 inches high, weighs 89 pounds and is 40 years of age.

The Great Parker Amusement Company leaves Sunday morning for Clarksville, Tenn., where a carnival will be held next week. From there they go on south, playing Nashville later in the season. With them go the best wishes of success from Hopkinsville for a clean and first class carnival company.

ADJOURNED THURSDAY.

Louisville Gets the Next Meeting in 1906.

The Pythian Grand Lodge Wednesday night, after a long discussion, decided by a vote of 133 to 96 to sell the proposed site for a home in Fayette county. The lodge is committee of the whole voted to so report by a vote of 119 to 97.

The matter was disposed of without bitterness and the decision was arrived at without any show of feeling.

The Board of Control bought the Gibson farm of 110 acres near Lexington for $30,000. The Fayette lodge gave $10,000 to secure the location of the Orphans' Home and Lexington and Fayette county contributed the money, reserving the right to buy Fayette county orphans in the home. This "string" was the bone of contention and resulted in the refusal to accept the condition.

The plan is to sell the home, which can be sold for $30,000, and return the $10,000 with thanks. The loss sustained will be confined to about $2,300 expenses incurred in the matter, and the question will come up again next year.

Prot McIlwaine Rhodes presided during the discussion and both sides gave him a rising vote of thanks for his fairness and impartiality.

The new members of the Board of Control were named: R. O. Fitch, Winchester; Emmet Orr, Covington; and Jesse Phillips, Earlinton.

Lexington and Beattyville asked for the next meeting, but the committee recommended Louisville and the recommendation was adopted.

The minimum initiation fee was reduced from $15 to $10. The age of membership was left at 21 years.

The routine business of the Grand Lodge was concluded at noon Thursday and the Lodge adjourned.

SOMETHING NEW.

"Daredevil Dorothy" to be Presented Next Week.

The new melodramatic musical comedy success, "Daredevil Dorothy," will be presented at Holland's Opera House next Wednesday night, Oct. 11. The past four years four companies of this novelty have been touring Europe. The performance embraces melodrama, musical comedy, a circus, a revelry, elements which have heretofore been given to the theatre-going public separately. The story of the play is of deep interest, the situations and climaxes thrilling, and the musical theme which runs through the entire piece is said to be one of the sweetest and most harmonic yet put before an audience.

ANNUAL MEETING

The Little River Baptist Association, which had been in session at Cerulean Springs three days, adjourned yesterday afternoon. The introductory sermon was preached by Rev. Whittenbecker, a visiting minister of Ohio. Large crowds attended all the sessions. Capt. W. J. Stone, of Kuttawa, was re-elected moderator. The association will meet in Cadiz next year.

HAVE YOU A CHANCE ON THE Charter Oak Range?

We are Going to Give it away

Next Saturday, October 7th,
In Front of Our Store.

This is the plan. You have all to gain and nothing to lose, as you are not required to trade a penny's worth. Only call and give us your name and address.

In giving this fine Charter Oak away, we have decided on a plan by which we will have nothing to say as to what person shall have it. The plan is this:

We propose to number 3,000 cards from 1 to 3,000 consecutively and give one of these tickets to every grown up person who calls for one, free of charge until they are all gone. We have written to the Charter Oak and Range Co., of St. Louis, to put a number between 1 and 3,000 on a card, seal it up and send it to the bank here addressed to Mr. H. C. Gant, and at 2:30 p. m. Oct. 7, Mr. Gant will open that package in front of our store, and the one holding the number that we have given away to correspond with the number in Mr. Gant's hand will get the stove, if presented within 30 minutes after the number is announced, by the person who received the number from us.

Mr. Southall Accepts.

To the Democratic Committee:— Having been tendered the nomination for representative from Christian county by your committee, permit me to express in this public manner my high appreciation of the honor conferred. I was in no wise a candidate for the position and the nomination was not only unsolicited but came to me as a complete surprise, but nevertheless I am constrained to obey the call of my party and hereby accept the nomination, pledging myself to do all I can to carry the Democratic standard to victory. I believe the time has come to put down rigid rule in Christian county and I am more than willing to devote my best efforts to bring about a result so badly needed and so much desired by the best citizens of the county, of all parties.

TOBACCO MARKET.

Receipts Nearing the Ten Thousand Mark.

Receipts on the local tobacco market this week were small. Sales amounted to thirty-seven hogheads. Receipts for the year foot up 9,600 hogheads and sales for the same period, 6,600 hogheads. There is but little change in quotations. The market is quiet. About 95 per cent. of the 1905 crop is in the barn and the most of it has been cured.
